also. Therefore, less incidence of viewing educational programmes in this age-group is not unexpectd. However, under the revised Centrally sponsored scheme for educational technology started in the last quarter of 1987-88, 14534 TV sets have been sanctioned so far to schools in the States covered by the INSAT educational transmissions. More TV sets are proposed to be given to schools in the current year and in the next year. In view of the substantially augmentod viewing facility in schools now coming about the proportion of children viewing educational programmes is expected to grow fast now. It may also be noted that the incidence of viewing video programmes among children cannot be large simply because availability of VCRs in India is yet very limited.

As present three types of educational television programmes are being telecast for different age-groups of students. For the school students the programmes are aimed at the primary level, for the 6-11 age-group, and the transmission covers 5 language regions, i.e., Oriya, Telugu, Marathi Gujarati and all Hindi speaking States for 45 minutes each for 5 days in a week during school days. Secondly, syllabus-based school programmes for secondary level are telecast by terrestrial stations at Delhi, Bombay, Madras and Srinagar. Thirdly, country-wide classroom programmes of UGC are telecast for under-graduate students.
